The Practical Poultryman.

The practical poultryman of today studies the Poultry Food problem with as great care as the practical farmer does the question of fertilizers. He has found that it is profitable to do so. He finds that his energies toward inducing his hens to do their best work when eggs are highest. That George F. Turner of Springfield, Vt., has given careful attention to the matter of food for his hens is evident. He writes the manufacturer: "I believe that it is not only necessary to feed 'Page's Perfect Poultry Food' in winter and the molting season, but all the year around, although in smaller quantities in the summer months. I have never fed so much before as this season and have never had hens lay as well."

GUILTY OF LIQUOR-SELLING.

Four Respondents in Caledonia County Court Yesterday.

St. Johnsbury, Dec. 20.—In Caledonia County Court James Cardella and Harry Kaylor retraced their pleas of not guilty of violating the liquor law. Cardella pleaded guilty to one offense and Kaylor to two. Mr. and Mrs. Luigi Soldini each pleaded guilty to one offense for violating the liquor laws and were fined each $300 and costs.

Several of the respondents in the state cases in county court have retraced their plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. Mrs. Testaldi Rossi pleaded guilty to one offense of violating the liquor laws and was fined $300, without costs. Russi Barr has pleaded guilty to one offense and Wallace Answorth has pleaded guilty to intoxication, but neither have been sentenced. James Berland of Danville pleaded guilty to intoxication for second offense and was fined $15 and costs amounting to $10.05.

The test of the power of the Chittenden Power company's plant at Chittenden, which was to have been made Saturday afternoon by electrical engineers and students employed by the company, was delayed on account of a large amount of snow in the large tube running from the dam to the power house. It was impossible to get steam through the tube and therefore impossible to get any power. It will be necessary for the engineers to clean out the tube before testing the power. Mr. Bryant, the head engineer, and all the students returned to their homes Saturday night. They will return the last of this week, when an attempt will be made to make another test.

Jed Spaulding's Joke.

The late "Jed" Spaulding, of Michigan, who weighed 350 pounds and stood 6 feet 5 inches in his socks, was one of the best jokers in the State. He had a brother-in-law in politics whom he did not like very well and once very vigorously expressed his candidly for Mayor of Port Huron, Mich. One day while the campaign was at its height the ministers of the city held a meeting to decide which candidate to support. Jed happened to meet one of the pastors on the way on the meeting. This preacher was an aged Scotchman and somewhat hard of hearing. He told Spaulding that he would do all he could to prevent the brother-in-law's indorsement and asked for a pointer or two for a speech. Spaulding, ever ready for a joke, saw his chance, and, pulling the pastor aside shouted in his ear: "My brother-in-law is living with another man's sister." You don't tell me," the pastor said and he hurried off to the meeting to spread the news among the ministers. He got the platform immediately and said: "The Democratic candidate is a most wicked wretch. He is living with another man's sister. I have the word of his brother-in-law, Jed Spaulding for it." Immediately the meeting was in an uproar. The mention of Jed Spaulding was enough. The laughter became tumultuous, but the pastor didn't notice the mistake he had made until told that Jed Spaulding himself was the "other man."—Kansas City Star.
